This is brave and noble action. However, we already know some of the names. And people who become dangerous to them seem to be found dead under mysterious circumstances. Usually suicidal. I pray this doesn't happen to them.

Yea release what you got. If any signed NDA's they will have a problem. If there are big names they better be ready. Big money brings big attorneys and the mudslinging will be intense.

They blathered on & on for two hours when they could have just released the list right then and there and talked about the who, what & when (we know the where). But, like most women, no matter the seriousness of the issue for the nation, in actuality it's all about them and their feelz.

The Epstein survivors' courage and determination to share their stories are truly inspiring. They're taking a powerful step towards healing and accountability by seeking justice and transparency. By creating their own list and speaking out, they're not only advocating for themselves but also for future generations, ensuring that no one else suffers in silence. Their resilience and unity in the face of such adversity is a testament to the strength of the human spirit. Thank you for your bravery and for standing up against injustice. Your voices matter, and your actions will make a difference.
