> Be American-born Jeet

> Go to one of the most prestigious schools in the country

> Start AI company, get shit load of funding from Y Combinator

> ScamJeet.exe launches suddenly

> Send all work to India

> They fabricate all reports for clients to submit to auditors so clients can pass audits

> Lazily created same approval template without doing any actual work

> Shocked that they got caught

The people who claimed Indians have 76 IQ should be investigated because there's no way it's that high

Compliance in days, Security that lasts.
AI-native compliance trusted by 1,800+ of the fastest-growing companies. Delve Technology firms are distancing themselves from AI-powered compliance startup Delve following a bombshell Substack post that alleges that the company “fakes compliance while creating the appearance of compliance.”

On March 18, an anonymous Substack account named Deepdelver published a lengthy article that claimed to have evidence that Delve had been generating “fraudulent” audit reports, lying about the security measures it implements, and fabricating “evidence of board meetings, tests, and processes that never happened.” The post claims that Delve “scammed” hundreds of clients including Lovable, Cluely, and Wispr Flow. Delve did not respond to Inc’s request for a comment.

Delve was founded in 2023 by Gen-Z entrepreneurs Karun Kaushik and Selin Kocalar, and was part of Y Combinator’s winter 2024 batch. The company promised to use “agentic AI” to speed through compliance certification in days rather than weeks or months.

Soon this will be done almost exclusively by American born Indians. You're familiar with Vivek Scam-a-swamy right?

Ok but you could apply this template to basically any white SV startup too. The only difference is that this guy is replacing Americans with his own people. The whites replace Americans with others.

You're too dumb to see the actual variables that matter here.

Whites don't replace their own. We're unique in that we're the only ones playing this losing game

Brown people like yourself can't see this dynamic

So you cherry-picked one bad example and figured that extrapolates to mean that all Indians are like that? What do you reckon your own IQ is? There are many counter-examples of Indians doing high IQ and non-fraudulent stuff.

Ya there's definitely a group of people out there trying to convince another group that there's an archetype for success patterned after these folks, my experience, which some say our experience's doesn't matter, is this is not true. Without punishment how is a crime defined?

"Go to one of the most prestigious schools"

you know how most of them get in to western countries in the first place? fake credentials.

Starting from their parents all the way to new H1Bs jeets. They get fake degree to pretend they're competent.

Most Indians cannot be trusted, unfortunately. It's just reality. They are incompatible with Western civilization because their values are different. They should be building their own country, not scamming in ours.

Having worked extensively with Indians in tech , this is a common thing. The first thought is to send all the work overseas to get it done as cheap as possible, the second thought is how can they hide it from the client and make it look like everything has been built in-house.

They will hide everything from you since you don't speak the language, and present it back to you as authentic. It's in their DNA to work this way.

That is just the tip of the iceberg. Indian CEOs and executives ,and HR staff and hiring management pose a national security threat to American workers because they're firing them en masse and replacing them with under qualified Indians. Indian leadership is nothing but fraud.

My job has hired "contractors" who are Indian and they literally just ask claude for everything. I walked up to one to ask something and they literally copy pasted a basic email into claude (not the professional one which secures data either btw) a basic email and asked what it meant and what they need to do.

Why would they not leverage cheap labor. Why the hell would they hire random VAs from the Philippines when they can setup their own employees in India as VAs. I see nothing wrong with this. Rando white business owner would love access to Indian labor instead of VAs. Think 🙄 man.
