I went to Coachella in 2007, saw RATM, Dj Tiesto, Red Hot Chili Peppers. It was the last of that "era" of festivals, before smartphones and corpslop took over.

Originally Coachella was designed to be low cost but then women found how to activate credit cards so they jacked the prices. Smart move tbh

Yes, Coachella was originally designed to be a lower-priced, artist-friendly "anti-Woodstock" experience compared to the mainstream, high-fee concerts of the 1990s. m we are mitú +2

Here are the key details about its origin:

- Origin (1999): The inaugural 1999 festival featured tickets costing only $50 a day.

- Purpose: It was organized by Goldenvoice to be a high-comfort, curated, "anti-Woodstock" event, focusing on music and artist experience rather than corporate sponsorship.
