I'm. So. Fucking. Furious.

I've been pretty lonely lately and wanted to meet some other lesbians in my area.

I went on Meetup, a website where you can find groups, to see if I could find a lesbian group where I live. Sure enough, there is. With like a thousand members! Score!

When I checked the description of the group, it said, and I quote: "Our membership is for lesbians only, per the traditional definition: females/born female,"

It's the only lesbian group in my area, and they purposefully shut trans women out. It's not fair.

Edit: It was the kind of group that you have to apply to join. Though I was incredibly unsure about it, I applied, making it VERY clear that I am a trans woman. I called out the phrasing in their description, and told them that they should change the language in it if they didn't mean to exclude trans women. The application was denied.

Trans 'women' who claim that you are lesbians: Why don't you date each other then?

Maybe you know that you are men?

The audacity, reading very clear signage that they don't want you then thinking "I'll apply anyways and while applying, scold them for excluding me, that will make them change their minds!"

real talk tho... joining a group that literally says "not for you" then getting shocked when they say no is kinda wild. sometimes people just want THEIR space and that's it.

She was lucky to find such a huge Lesbian group. I know the popularity probably has something to do the people born female thing but I am sure with a bit of hunting they will be able to find a Lesbian group that welcomes Trans & not just because only 15 men in dresses are left.
