Schools are cancelling Picture Day because of a wave of concerned parents who don't trust the school photo company Lifetouch after they've been tied to Epstein via billionaire Leon Black

Picture Day Canceled Over Epstein Rumors... I Feel Sick

Policy & Politics

My school just announced that picture day is canceled tomorrow. Apparently there's been a huge wave of concerned parents claiming Lifetouch is mentioned in the Epstein files. The school says they're canceling and having lawyers review the contract.

I'm not usually one for conspiracy theories, but the idea that someone like that could have access to school photos nationwide is honestly disturbing. It makes you think about how Epstein identified and targeted vulnerable kids/families, especially in rural or low-income communities.

This whole situation feels like something out of a horror movie.

I never understood why schools wouldn't just hire local photographers and get the equipment necessary to print in-house given how much they need them.

Seems cheaper than everyone hiring the same national firm, no?

Parents aren't just 'canceling' a day; they're drawing a line. The fact that these ties were exposed by the Epstein Files highlights a massive failure in school board vetting. It's time for a full systemic reset on who gets access to our kids. ☁️

Lifetouch is a large school-photography company used by thousands of schools, Lifetouch itself is not named in the Jeffrey Epstein files. What is true is that Lifetouch is owned by Shutterfly, which is in turn owned by investors managed by Apollo. Leon Black — a co-founder and former CEO of Apollo — appears in the Epstein files because of his past financial relationship with Epstein. That chain of ownership is very indirect and does not mean Lifetouch was involved in, benefited from, or had anything to do with Epstein's crimes.

This seems more of a rumor than fact. No search came up with any Epstein document that said this. Please share if you have one.

Lifetouch is also doing school photos in Canada along with their affiliate, Everest Solutions. I'm still researching the other Canadian companies that do school pics. Maybe consider hiring a private photographer for your kids school photos.
