Judge Davis's leniency sends a dangerous signal: fairness can't be weaponized in sentencing.

When you use race to carry out bias judgment because you're black, you don't deserve to be a judge on that bench... That's simple

Imagine being the survivor in this case and hearing that your attacker's 65 year sentence was cut to 30 because of his 'potential.' The justice system is supposed to provide closure, but decisions like this just reopen the wound. Safety in our communities depends on real consequences for violent acts

I worked in a max security prison. If an inmate is telling you they don't care as he allegedly has done, then he really doesn't care and there is no chance of rehabilitation. With most inmates there is no chance anyway. Focus on the truly repentant and the victimless crimes.

The feminine spirit seeks to shield from punishment and apply mercy at the expense of justice. Hence why criminals get soft hands and victims become victimized again. The masculine seeks to apply mercy only where it is truly due, and apply justice as well as punishment to make sure the victims get some level of peace. We live in a feminine age.

Judge Tracy Davis overrode a jury's 65-year sentence and gave a violent kidnapper and sexual assailant just 30 years—citing his youth, immaturity, and “disadvantages as a Black man”—while he cursed the court and showed zero remorse.

Were the victims' rights, trauma, or safety ever considered at all? This leniency endangers the public and undermines justice.

When will Kentucky hold judges accountable for prioritizing ideology over victims? @kentuckycourts

All racially motivated, because she thinks now that she has some power as a judge that she has this moral obligation to reduce or even eliminate repercussions of black criminals as some offset of reality for slavery.
