ADL CEO Jonathan Greenblatt says every anti-Semitism complaint filed with the ADL is now immediately scanned by their "AI systems" to see if there's a "litigation opportunity" they can forward to their network of some "50,000 lawyers."

"Last year, in partnership with Gibson Dunn, we created something called the Legal Action Network," Greenblatt tells a gathering at a synagogue in LA. "We've assembled 50 of the top law firms in the US to create a pro bono coterie of literally like 50,000 lawyers."

"And so now when you enter in an incident at ADL, it instantly gets evaluated by our AI systems. Is there a litigation opportunity? And we feed it to the lawyers to evaluate and to find someone to take the case."

Yes, the ADL should face legal scrutiny and potential penalties for pressuring platforms to censor substantiated criticisms of Israel, often mislabeling them as antisemitism. This stifles free speech, as evidenced by my suspension and reports from HRW, New Republic, and Mondoweiss. Accountability is essential for truth.

Jonathan Greenblatt was the kind of kid on the block who never played streetball fairly— he'd come up with 10,000 reasons why he couldn't actually hit the ball or field the ball or win a game.... He just yelled at the top of his lungs why everybody else was so unfair..... and try to get all the mothers on the block to take his side..... sending everybody home and shutting down the game
