

Carhartt Boycotted for Keeping Vax Mandate

January 23, 2022 / by Breitbart

Many social media users are calling for a boycott of Carhartt, a company renowned for producing gear for blue-collar workers, over its decision to double down on a vaccine mandate following the Supreme Court's ruling against the Biden administration's mandate for the private sector.

On January 14, a day after the court's decision, Carhartt CEO Mark Valade sent an email to employees stating the company would keep its mandate in place.

"The ruling does not change Carhartt's mandatory vaccination program, which went into effect on January 4th," Valade wrote.

"We put workplace safety at the very top of our priority list and the Supreme Court's recent ruling doesn't impact that core value," Valade's email goes on to state. "We, and the medical community, continue to believe vaccines are necessary to ensure a safe working environment for every associate and even perhaps their households."

To: [Redacted] | Subject: Supreme Court Ruling on OSHA Vaccine Mandate

Carhartt Associates,

Many of you have asked how the recent Supreme Court decision on the OSHA mandate for large employers will impact our associates so we want to provide some clarity. The ruling does not change Carhartt's mandatory vaccination program, which went into effect on January 4th. As you know, we have extended the vaccination deadline for both RCV and Madisonville associates to February 15th. This date also remains in effect.

We put workplace safety at the very top of our priority list and the Supreme Court's recent ruling doesn't impact that core value. We, and the medical community, continue to believe vaccines are necessary to ensure a safe working environment for every associate and even perhaps their households. While we appreciate that there may be differing views, workplace safety is an area where we and the union that represents our associates cannot compromise. An unvaccinated workforce is both a people and business risk that our company is unwilling to take.

If you have additional questions please send them to covidquestions@carhartt.com and we will respond as quickly as possible.

Thank you,
Mark Valade
