Every time I try to cooperate with another white dude, my heart gets broken.

Guys I grew up with.

Frat bros from college.

My fellow whites get really awkward whenever I try to create a win-win long-term mutually beneficial relationship.

It's not part of our culture.

As far as I can tell, it's a part of Chinese culture and Jewish culture.

Chinese will be like "let's be friends" and that doesn't mean we're going to be going fishing together.

It means we are going to favor trade for mutual benefit.

Jews will be like "oh he's Jewish" and there is now a bond and a mutual understanding on which bread can be broken and business can be built.

But the rest of the whites?

"Let's cooperate" is met with massive distrust and hesitation, almost fear.

What the fuck.

Do you realize how much that holds us all back?

I'm not saying we should be conspiring here.

Just I scratch your back, you scratch mine.

I'm fine with helping you 10% more than you help me.

So long as you don't take too much I'll give no problem.

This might be happening in the churches, I don't know.

I think it's happening with the gays, but again, don't know.

Okay so let's do this.

I'm open for business.

You help me, I'll help you.

I'm not perfect, but I'll do my best.

And that goes for everyone, doesn't matter who you are.

If you're a good person, I am here for you, just hit me back every now and again.

The salesman had an unusual last name and I asked the origin and we got to talking about 23andMe.

He asked me if I had any surprises.

"Yeah there was one, I found out I was part Jewish but you already knew that from how hard I negotiated over the price."
